Dr. Schultz graduated from Indiana University of Pennsylvania with a doctorate in education, concentration in school psychology. He has extensive experience as a project coordinator and clinical research scientist on the Challenging Horizons Program—a school-based program for adolescents with ADHD—most recently conducted by the Center for Intervention Research in Schools at Ohio University. He moved to Greenville, NC in August 2013 to join the Pediatric School Psychology program at East Carolina University. Dr. Schultz is interested in the developmental course of externalized behavior disorders, particularly as it relates to the academic and social impairments that emerge in adolescence. His current research focuses on the application of technology to improve school-based treatment dissemination and implementation.
